Actions to stop doing:

At this time, the team does not have anything pressing they believe should be stopped. The time and frequency of their meetings seems to work well and the important information is passed along. The current development process for coding has also been going smoothly.

Actions to start doing:

The team should start creating separate branches per tasks, and send a pull request upon completion to avoid merge conflicts. The team should also look into following a coding style guide so all parts of the project are easily understood. Members should also try to be more active in resolving pull requests to familiarize themselves with the whole project, spreading the workload evenly, and also delete branches that have already been merged to prevent cluttering.

Actions to keep doing:

The team likes being able to have spontaneous meetings on top of the regular meetings whenever additional work needs to be done, such as planning out a sprint, or a group debugging session. Continuing to have at least one person review any changes before merging to main is also something the team wants to keep doing. The team also likes having a figma design to follow to keep the app uniform.

Work completed:

- As a post author, I want to have a dedicated portal for my own posts so I can manage them.
- As a specialist in my service, I want to be able to create a public profile, so that other users know my skills and service history.
- As a forgetful user, if I change my login credentials, I can sign back in.
- As a small businessman I want to communicate with my clients so that I can stay on top of jobs.

Work not completed:

- As a broke college student I want to find jobs so that I can make money doing peoples tasks.
 - Task 1: When creating a post a user should be able to add a price for a job
 - Task 3: Users should be able to save posts for later
 - Task 4: Make ability to set price exclusive to service provider
